During the early morning hours of a day in October 1992, a Mesa police officer became suspicious of a car travelling east on Broadway Road in Mesa. He began following the car, and after observing two traffic violations and learning that the car's insurance had been canceled or had expired, he activated his overhead lights and tried to stop the car. A chase ensued during which the car reached speeds up to eighty-five miles per hour and passed through both green and red lights at several intersections. As the chase continued, the car headed towards Tempe. The pursuit ended when the car ran a red light at the intersection of Guadalupe and Price roads and collided with another car that was travelling south on Price. The driver of the other car, the Plaintiffs' daughter, was killed in the collision.
